Public Transport in Sydney and NSW

Sydney and the entire state of NSW use a unified public transport system covering buses, trains, metro, ferries and light rail. All services operate on the Opal network, where fares are calculated automatically.

The easiest way to travel is to use your bank card (Visa, Mastercard, Amex). Tap your card when entering and exiting transport. The system automatically calculates daily and weekly fares and applies discounts.

Prices and caps

Maximum daily and weekly fares:

- 19.30 AUD per day (Mon–Thu) – approx. 12 EUR
- 9.65 AUD per day (Fri–Sun & public holidays) – approx. 6 EUR
- 50 AUD per week – approx. 30 EUR

These caps apply across the entire state, including intercity travel (e.g., Sydney–Newcastle, Sydney–Wollongong, Sydney–Blue Mountains). The Opal week runs Monday–Sunday. After reaching 50 AUD in a week, all further travel is free for the rest of that week, but you must still tap your card.

Opal Card (alternative to bank card)

If you prefer not to use your bank card, you can purchase an Opal Card, load money onto it, and use it the same way. Opal Cards are sold at kiosks, stations and supermarkets.

Airport station fee

If you arrive in Sydney by plane and take the train from the airport to the city, an additional airport station fee of 19 AUD (approx. 12 EUR) applies. This fee is charged only at airport stations and is added to the regular train fare.

Single tickets

Single trips generally cost 3–9 AUD, depending on distance and transport mode.

Below are the key festival events. The full program includes many more activities, some of which are free. The final festival schedule will be confirmed in September, and registration and ticket sales will open in October 2026.
